

Profits in Britain's top companies are up by 47% but it's predicted that workers' real wages could experience the biggest fall in 100 years. Meanwhile the food bank charity, The Trussell Trust, is handing out emergency food parcels every 13 seconds as demand soars amid the cost of living crisis.

This situation cannot stand any longer without persistent, permanent challenge. Only a rebirth of the trade union movement which becomes the lifeblood of local communities can help drive that change.

There are no short cuts, we must build popular working class power.

We must do it ourselves

Our economy isn't working for anyone but the wealthiest people and biggest corporations. Workers like us who kept our nation running throughout the pandemic are struggling to get by, while the 1% reap the rewards of our labour.

It is time to face facts. There is no Westminster hero coming to save us. We must do it ourselves, before it's too late.

Unite for a worker's Economy will campaign to put working people over profit and politics. We're focusing our energy into building popular, working class power in order to fundamentally change the system that is rigged against us.

KEY ISSUES

Workers and community members across the political spectrum are united in this campaign to win five key priorities:

- 1 Higher wages: Working people deserve better than to be pushed aside for corporate profit. As our living expenses continue to rise, we demand access to wages that allow us to support ourselves and our families.
- 2 Freedom from food poverty: We believe food security is a basic human right, and will fight to ensure everyone regardless of job title, location or background has the means to feed themselves.
- 3 Investment in and protection for members of the NHS: Far too many of our pandemic heroes continue to lack living wages and basic protections on the job. After years of sacrifice, members of the NHS now face a 7% pay cut. We refuse to let this injustice stand.
- 4 Adequate pensions: After a lifetime of hard work in service to our nation's economy, every single one of us deserves access to a liveable pension that allows us to retire comfortably. It is past time that corporations pay their dues to the workers who keep their businesses running.
- 5 Affordable energy: Corporate greed is causing record high energy costs. We demand energy giants do more to protect people this winter – and every winter.
